Notes:

合コン gōkon

In this lesson we talked about gōkon which is like a matching making party or a blind group date. It's popular amongst young people, students and office workers who are too busy to hang out and meet people. According to my friends it was most popular in the 90s. Although it's not as popular now, it's probably not going away any time soon: busy Japanese office workers who work long hours will always need an excuse to go out and meet people.
